

SEEN AND HEARD BY GEORGE MINER

Special Correspondent of The Washington Herald.
(Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

New York, March 2.—That the only way to end the world war and to insure a lasting peace among all nations is for each country to give to a certain extent and put something on the table, and that the neutral countries must come in and do the same thing is the firm belief of Mr. Gutzon Borglum, the famous sculptor.

The horror and uselessness of this war have stirred Mr. Borglum's soul to its very depths. It also has aroused in him an absorbing interest in international politics so that for months he has been making a careful study of the existing conditions in the hope of finding some possible and practicable way of bringing the war to an end.

New Under Consideration.
He thinks he has found a way and has worked out his scheme in detail.

There is a chance that his labors may bear fruit. The committee on foreign relations in Washington now has his idea under consideration and Mr. Borglum is quite optimistic as to the tenor of their report. Fortunately for Borglum, a number of other leading minds in Europe and America were in the same way of thinking and so he found no little support from several unexpected quarters.

As we all know, numerous peace schemes have been proposed, including several jokes, but they all favored one side or the other and consequently got nowhere. Dr. Dumley, the famous London editor, has been working along the same line as the American sculptor and has succeeded in getting in touch with the Kaiser and obtaining his present point of view.

"What is it really they are fighting for?" asked Mr. Borglum.

"National integrity," answered Dr. Rumley.

Chips in the Game.
"Well, then, to get that all sides must be willing to go in on a give-and-take preparation. They must all chip in to a common pool. If the United States is in earnest about wanting to stop the war and is willing to be arbitrated—which she can't be and it is out of the question—let her start the game by putting on the table the Panama Canal, Guam and Hawaii."

"Then let England chip in the Suez Canal and Gibraltar, Germany come up with the Kiel Canal, Turkey with the Dardanelles, and every other nation that owns strategic points on the world's surface contribute them to the common cause. That will prove their own good intentions."

"These points are to be owned in common, governed by the common commission and policed by the international army."

"Each country is to have a representation based on population, wealth and education. Mere numbers, mere money or mere learning cannot have the controlling hand. They must be blended."

"No nation to have an army of more than 5,000 men, which is to be used purely for police work and changed each year from one state to another, so that the Panama Canal, for instance, would one year be garrisoned by Russians, next by Turks, then Italians, then Germans, then Japanese, and so on."

"Every soldier in every army should be educated in a military college and being a member of this international military police, should be made a great honor and a distinction eagerly sought for. As the armies are small the pay should be large, so that the best element among the young men of a country would be attracted."

All Without Prejudice.

"In time this would make a genuine cosmopolitan army, whose members would be internationalities, broad-minded and liberal in consequence of their living and associating with all the other peoples of the world. It is provincialism that makes narrow-minded people and it is narrow-minded people who are stubborn and unreasonable and bring about war by their mulish propensities. When people can see and understand both sides of a question they don't go to war."

"Of course, each country would conduct its own affairs in its own way, and be as distinct from other countries as it pleased. Only in international relations would the commission's and the common army agreement be effective."

They point to the fact that the fulfillment of their plan will in no way interfere with national integrity, but, on the contrary, will be a powerful guarantee of it for years to come.

Let us hope this is not a dream and that if it's what they claim, the nations will go to it.

You Can Win an Auto and $200 In The Herald's "50,000 Club"

An opportunity that only knocks at your door once in a lifetime is now presented by The Washington Herald's "50,000 Club" in the offer of prizes aggregating several thousand dollars, the greatest newspaper proposition ever presented for the consideration of the people of Washington and surrounding territory.

Think of it! This newspaper wants to give you, as first prize, a Mitchell "Six" of 16" touring car, one of the most durable and handsome machines to be had. This touring car will go to the best vote-getter and was purchased by The Washington Herald from Miller Bros., 1406 H street northwest.

And that is not all. The same person can win this magnificent touring car and receive $200 in gold as an extra cash prize by putting forth extra effort during the "Banner period" which ends Saturday night, March 11, at 12 o'clock. The winner of the first grand prize will have something more than one of the best touring cars made, and he or she will have the honor that necessarily crowns the efforts of such a successful vote-getter in such a well-known and popular campaign as this.

The first prize is not the only thing to work for in this campaign. There are two additional automobiles; an $800 Saxon "6," purchased from the Record Auto Company, 631-633-635 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and a $680 Maxwell "25," purchased from H. B. Leary, Jr., 1321 Fourteenth street, as second and third grand prizes.

Fourth and fifth grand prizes, an $850 Bradbury Player-piano, and a $550 Chickering piano, purchased from the F. C. Smith Piano Company, 1217 P street northwest.

Sixth grand prize, a $250 Electric Columbia Gramophone and $100 worth of the latest records, purchased from House & Herrmann, Seventh and I streets northwest.

In addition to the six grand prizes, there are forty-four district prizes and an unlimited amount of cash commissions to be distributed to the active members of the "50,000 Club" who do not win one of the fifty prizes.

Decide now to be among the winners on March 24. The early bird has a tried and true reputation. Putting a thing off till tomorrow never got anybody anything. The man who said: "There is no time like the present" certainly said something. Stop and think what it means to own your own automobile, a piano or a pile of gold in exchange for a little of your spare time.

There is an additional reason why you should do your best today, tomorrow and every day thereafter until Saturday night, March 11, at 12 o'clock. The reason is, double votes and $200 in gold.
